Not as good as Me on the Map, yet a good jumping off point to introduce concepts of time.

This is the second Joan Sweeny book I have bought from this "Me" series. I also have "Me On the Map." Both are great. I teach second grade and the kids love it. Both books work really well for extensions with cross curricular projects. I highly recommend!

THIS is the best book for learning how to count. We love it and get it out all the time. The illustrations are so well done and easy to read.

Bought this on behalf of a school district teacher. I have not heard anything negative, so I am assuming that it was a good purchase.

I gave it 4 stars because I thought Me on the Map more age appropriate for my five year old grandchild than Me Counting Time. I am giving her educational gifts (not requiring batteries) for Christmas. Focusing on time, I purchased Me Counting Time, a clock game, and toy clock as companion pieces. I also bought multi-cultural toys to encourage her understanding and appreciation of diversity. They include games, maps, dolls, puppets and books that embrace cultural differences. Back to the Me Counting Time book: it begins with seconds, graduates to minutes & hours; finishing with the Millineum. The Millineum is more than she will be able to grasp at 5 years old. (that's why only 4 stars) but that's ok. Time will take care of that. I Love Sweeney's books and her original approach to making learning fun. I'm looking forward to exploring the rest of the series.

I wanted to use this book to help teach the concept of time. I don't really think this book is very good for that at all.

Grand daughter loves this book. Easy to understand, I would say fun to read, lots of pictures with descriptive text. Would recommend for a 6-7 year old and up.
